SOMETHING BIG IS BREWING @HATCHET
by matt foley

Hatchet Brewing Company on the South end of Broad Street has quickly grown into a Southern Pines favorite spot, and music venue.

We sat down with Whitney Varner, tap room manager, to get her perspective on the growing live music scene in Southern Pines. Whitney hails from Sanford where she worked her way up from bartending to managing and credits the influence of a previous manager for her current success at Hatchet. Whitney answers emails and is genuinely engaged and enthusiastic about the performers and bands that play.

"It's important that a band or artist has a great social media presence, that way I can choose a variety of styles for the brewery and it helps me reach possible new patrons through their followers."

Additionally, she enjoys the crowd interaction, which makes the performance fun and memorable for those in attendance. When asked to name a few of her favorite local acts, she highlighted Whiskey Pines, and Stone Dolls (promise I didn't prompt her, Mary!), as well as solo acts Autumn Nicholas and Clark Bennett. She loves the way these performers put their own flavor on songs they cover.

Whitney added she'd like to see more nights of live music at the taproom, and can envision larger events in the area, perhaps a music festival including multiple performances and participating vendors. She recognizes the tremendous potential for growth of Hatchet Brewing Company and the Town of Southern Pines. In the spirit of community, Hatchet's two most recent beers have been created in collaboration with local businesses.

One new brew is a tasty ESB in collaboration with Sly Fox Pub. The other brew, a "must-have beer for Independence Day" was formed with local veteran-owned breweries, Rail House and Southern Pines Brewing Co. "Merican Independence Ale" comes out in June. Featuring a refreshing citrus character with a blend of citra and mosaic hops at a 6.8% abv. We can't wait to try it!

Hatchet hosts live music on Saturdays from 7-10pm and occasional Sundays with Pop Up in the Pines starting back up in the Fall. Whitney has also introduced plant swap nights, trivia nights, as well as vinyl nights with an in-house record player. With over 30 beers, ciders, and seltzers available as well as wine, there is something for everyone!
